Global Class: Digital Etiquette Notes, September 23rd

Who's here?
Canada United States Antarctica
Russia Zambia Malaysia Bangladesh
China

GLOCAL COMPLEXITY
INITIATIVE PASSIVE

Increase in online bullying.

Anonymity, imbalance of power, invincibility

Opportunity to innovate, adaptive, creative, big picture thinker, "dive into the fear"

Opportunity for global interaction, may not have been possible in the past

Lack of empathy leads to bad behaviour over the internet

Knowledge for media literacy

Cross cultural communication

Lack of initiative

Much braver online to express things, but there is a second side. Sometimes people don’t take initiative, don’t want to speak, or are afraid to talk. We don’t really know how to behave or communicate, so people take a step back and prefer to be passive participants.

Recommendations:

Know our limits

When receiving a message keep it private

Not react to people's comments in a negative way (in a constructive way)

Bad parenting results in bullies, show a better example to your children (empathy)

Parents should be educated

My recommendation would then be to allow yourself time when commenting or texting to make sure they don't sound sarcastic or rude, try and make them personable so the emotions of the text comes off the way intended.

My recommendation is to think about how it would make you feel if you someone said what you are thinking
More ways of spreading awareness about digital etiquette

Taking initiative starts within the individual, especially in their thoughts. Rising beside thoughts of shyness is what can boost our self esteem.

Need for control in terms of what is shared

Digital empathy to humanize netiquette

We observed that students had a lack of empathy. We need to have a class on digital empathy to humanize the online experience.

We have to initiate the talk on netiquette and cyberbullying. When we don’t talk, policy makers don’t listen.

To know the difference between a joke and being inconsiderate of others feelings

Policy should come from complaints.

Using the same platforms

Having a set of rules for successful communication in online classroom

Take initiative, ask questions

Being more on point

Giving clear explanations

Taking care about time of others

Civic media Literacies

Re-Imagining Human connection in the age of Digital abundance

RECOGNIZE cyberbullying or digital abuse as a social problem.