

Stephanie Ball - Bio

Stephanie is currently Executive Dean for the School of Justice and Emergency Services, and the School of Interdisciplinary Studies. She joined Durham College in 1999, teaching legal courses in the Legal Administration program. Shortly after joining the college she developed the Paralegal programs in the School of Justice which have enjoyed significant popularity. In her role as Executive Dean, she has overseen significant growth in the School of Justice, and the addition of a number of new programs. She has also overseen the development and maintenance of significant employer partnerships within the community, which have provided immeasurable benefit to students.

Prior to joining the college, Stephanie practiced law in the Durham Region, assisting many residents with legal issues in family, estate, real estate and business law. She subsequently joined the Durham Community Legal Clinic as Executive Director/Lawyer and continued to serve residents in areas of administrative law. She also has enjoyed appointments to the Alcohol and Gaming Commission and Canada Pension Plan Review Tribunal.

Throughout her professional career, Stephanie has volunteered extensively in her community. She has run for political office, chaired the Y.W.C.A. Board of Directors, chaired the Oshawa Hospital Foundation Board, and served in various capacities with various other community organizations. Volunteerism is something she continues to support in her current role, involving students in many activities to support their communities.
