

FLCA@Home and Away: Storytelling

San Felipe Chenla and Ojo de Agua, Guatemala

In-country – October 2024

Virtual – February 2025

Application deadline: May 3, 2024

Project description:

This project will connect you to Indigenous and traditional communities in Guatemala to learn, interact, and exchange knowledge and skills and develop a foundation for reconciliation at home. You will work with local Mayan youth to help create and tell stories about Indigenous rights in Canada, in Guatemala and around the world, while building the cross-cultural skills needed as a global citizen and as a professional. The program will host a final showcase at the end of the winter semester, featuring stories co-created by DC students and students in Guatemala. This project is open to all Media, Art and Design students.

Program/learning highlights:

- Visit local high schools to mentor Mayan youth
- Co-create stories using podcasts, photo essays, video stories or other mediums
- Co-create trailers, news releases and accessible social media posts to share the stories

Students will travel to Guatemala in person during the Fall Reading week, then participate in five 1.5-hour workshops during the Winter Reading week. During these sessions, MAD students will connect over Zoom with high school students in Guatemala (with the assistance of a translator) to act as mentors.

Dates:

In-country – Oct. 19 - 27 (Fall Reading Week)

Virtual – Feb. 24 - 28 (Winter Reading Week)

*Note: In-country dates may vary slightly depending on availability of flights.

Cultural highlights:

- You will be fully immersed in the rural Mayan community of San Felipe with a visit to the village of Ojo de Agua as well

Timeline:

- Application deadline: May 3 by 11:59 p.m. (see application information below)
- Applicant selection: end of May; successful candidates will be notified by the first week of June
- Team meeting: mid-June
- Initial deposit: $500 non-refundable deposit due by the team meeting in June.
